Love In Control Series

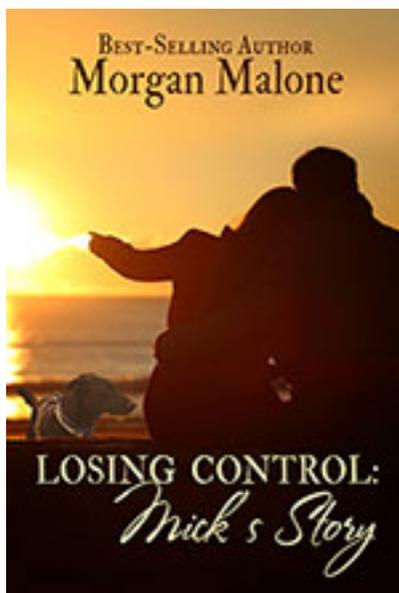

Out of Control: Kat's Story: Katarina Galchinsky is alone. And that was not how she had planned her life. At almost 40, she has a brilliant career, an expensive loft, and good friends. All she could want - except her beloved husband , who was stolen from her by the Iraqi War. Alone for almost ten years, Kat has controlled everything affecting her career as a partner in a top law firm, her family and her heart, so nothing bad can happen to her again. A platonic, but satisfying relationship with her old law school buddy, Zachary, has been all she's needed. Until now. Sam, a controlling lawyer, begins Kat on her journey of submission—in the boardroom and in the bedroom. Rick, a screenwriter and a Marine vet, introduces her to light bondage and more rough play at his beach house on the Jersey shore. Bradley is a brilliant yet wounded businessman who plays hard with a plethora of toys coupled with sometimes harsh commands in his quest to totally dominate Kat. Will Kat find what she's looking for in the arms of one of her lovers? Or is her heart's desire in the place she least expected?

Taking Control: Rick's Story: Summer on the Jersey Shore and all Rick Sheridan wants is some solitude at his beach house. Then he spots a lean, leggy blonde coming out of the surf and his plans are shot to hell. And the dangerous looking knife strapped to her arm tells him this is no damsel in distress. As a not-so retired Marine, at 51, Rick's learned that nothing is for certain, plans can spin out of control and shit happens. Wounded and weary from one too many wars, Britt Capshaw thought a summer at the Shore, hanging out in her family's beach cottage, would help her heal. And figure out what to do with the rest of her life. Out of the military, disillusioned and distrustful of any two-legged male, Britt's one love is Alex, the yellow Labrador retriever she rescued from Afghanistan. Can Britt trust Rick with her dangerous past? Will Rick be able to let go of the rigid control he needs to keep Britt and himself safe from more heartbreak? These two brave souls fight against surrendering their hearts and finally finding love. Who will win?

Losing Control: Mick's Story: I'm giving you six months to begin again. I'll show you the way, like I always have—nagging and pushing you. But then I'm gone. Annie Sullivan Mullarney was a force of Nature when she was alive. And hanging out in Heaven had not changed her. She's made life complicated for her beloved husband, Mick. Deciding she needs some peace and Mick needs to find a new love, Annie issues her final ultimatum on New Year's Eve. I'm going to ask her out for a date. Men still do that. Right? Widowed for six years, Mick Mullarney thought he was doing pretty damn well. His daughters lived in the family home and helped to run the family businesses. His best friend had a place nearby, with his sweetheart and a great dog. And he still heard from his beloved wife every once in a while. Yeah, Mick was fine. Until his Annie told him he had six months to get a life and a lady. What is a guy who hasn't dated in over twenty years to do? Why do you keep popping up in my head? I've come to the conclusion that I'm interested in you. I know very little about you so it must be purely a physical thing. All Maggie McDonald required in her perfectly-ordered life was maintaining control over her perfectly-ordered life. Keeping all men at a distance and her secrets to herself was all it took. Then a pretty little rescue dog came home with her, licked her hand and cracked the ice around her heart. And, through that opening, a sad-eyed, old-fashioned, tall, dark and handsome former Marine laid siege to her frozen emotions. Maggie was up for the battle, but did she want to win. Sparks fly, tempers clash as Maggie struggles to keep from learning the secret that has controlled her life for so long. Can two stubborn souls withstand an unlikely attraction, a needy canine Princess and a Heavenly force determined to bring them together?

Barefoot Bay World Novellas

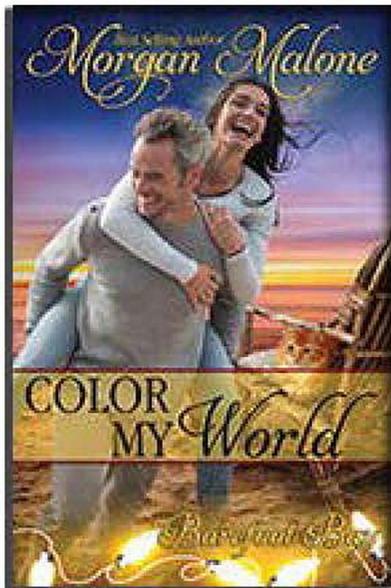

Shoulder to Lean On: Orthopedic surgeon Levi Gould is known throughout Mimosa Key as Dr. Hottie Rock Star. His silver-streaked black hair, whisky-brown eyes and gym rat physique - coupled with his skill in the operating room - gave him the nickname he detests. Losing his daughters in a messy divorce fueled his penchant for picking up and mending stray dogs and damaged souls. Until he met Ella Anderson. Ella arrives at Casa Blanca Resort and Spa to recover from injuries sustained in a violent attack. Known throughout the world as E. L. Levin, the best-selling author of the Bloody Murder series of books and the mega-hit movies they spawned, Ella is dodging the press - and her publisher - by hiding out on Mimosa Key. Swearing she is done with writing violent criminal mysteries, she is penning a happily ever after for Bloody Murder's crime-fighting duo. Even though their attraction is immediate, both Levi and Ella resist the burgeoning feelings for one another. The doctor with the damaged heart and the writer who believes true love only happens in books find themselves drawn closer and closer. But before they can find their own happy ending, they must confront the secrets that could destroy any chance they have for a forever together.

Need You Now: Tall and movie star handsome, John Fitzgerald Ford, is a successful orthopedic surgeon, relocated from New York to Mimosa Key. And he has become the island's most eligible bachelor. No one questions his skill as a surgeon but everyone wonders why the mysterious silver fox has never married. Fitz has had no interest in answering the unspoken questions about his single existence until the one woman he thought knew him best forces him to reveal his darkest secrets. Maureen Donovan O'Riley is finally free. After being trapped for twenty-five years in marriage to a cold and controlling man, she is now on her own. And planning to stay that way except for Honey, the fox terrier she rescued the day she buried her husband. Day by day she has been finding her way back to the woman she once was. Her transformation is almost complete. Then Fitz whispers "Hello, Beautiful" in her ear and she finds herself falling under the spell of another charismatic, strong-willed man. Even though Fitz and Maureen have known each other for years, suddenly there's a new element to their relationship: they can't keep their eyes or hands off each other. The doctor with the distant demeanor and the fiercely independent nurse are determined to control their futures and conceal their troubled pasts. Neither is looking for love but, to guard their wounded hearts, will they walk away from their chance at happy ever after?

Color My World: Missy Edmonds, Levi's feisty housekeeper, from Shoulder to Lean On, is back and she's in the arms of Don Smith, artist and gallery owner...or is that really who he is? The holidays are approaching and these "friends with benefits" are starting to have feelings for each other. Is it the light of the Hanukkah candles or the temptation of stolen kisses under the mistletoe that have them wanting more? This sexy silver fox and the lady he desires both have dark secrets to share before they can enjoy the gift of love. Missy arrived in Dr. Levi Gould's orthopedic clinic over three years ago, looking for all the world like a battered spouse or girlfriend on the run from an abusive relationship. Levi repaired her damaged shoulder and offered to let her stay in the caretaker's cottage on the estate he'd bought north of Casa Blanca Resort and Spa in exchange for dog-sitting his chocolate Lab, Hersch, and overseeing the repairmen who were rebuilding his house. Missy's work ethic and organizational skills soon made her indispensable to Levi, and eventually, his new bride, Ella. It seemed there was nothing Missy could not conquer, even the quiet and very private local artist, Don Smith. He's known on Mimosa Key as a talented painter of seascapes, a quality framer and the creator of the whimsical mural of moving vehicles in Dr. Levi Gould's surgical suite. But there are secrets that Don has not revealed to anyone on Mimosa Key, including his real name and tragic past. He's gotten close to Missy, physically oh-so-close, but has never told her the real reason he's living on a small Florida coastal island. Until now. Here's a seasoned romance that combines the magic of Hanukkah and Christmas, with a silver fox hero and a tough and talented heroine, a regal, disdainful cat and the beauty of a warm winter beach to serve up a sweet and sexy read that's just purrfect for the holidays.

Dreams of You: The hot silver fox docs at FL-Ortho are known throughout Mimosa Key for their skilled hands and gorgeous looks. Dr. Joel Alfonso was dubbed Dr. McDreamy in med school and the nickname has followed him all the way to Barefoot Bay. Attempts to hook him up with any of the lovely ladies on the island or in nearby Naples, FL have been unsuccessful because Joel's heart was lost over a decade ago to the only woman he has ever loved. Dr. Sydney Butler Washington, a brilliant and beautiful gene therapy research scientist, has recently moved to Barefoot Bay to work with Dr. Oliver Bradbury at IDEA. Dedicated to finding a cure for breast cancer, she long ago buried the heartbreak caused when she was forced to leave her first love just as they were about to begin a life together. A chance meeting at Casa Blanca Resort and Spa causes all the old feelings of regret, recrimination and romance to surface. Can they salvage their lost love or has too much time and too many lies caused wounds that even these skilled physicians cannot heal?

The "I'll Never Say I Do" Club

Someone Like You: “I dare you, I double, triple dare you, to go online for three months and really look at the guys who are out there just waiting to fall in love with the awesome women you are! I bet you that you will all be head over heels and engaged by the end of the year!” Seri, Jessica, Emily and Olivia made a vow in college never to marry when they formed The “I’ll Never Say I Do” Club. At 40, they are all rich, successful and alone. Then Seri meets and falls in love with a man she met online. At her Maine wedding, she issues a challenge to her three bridesmaids: Three months to meet a man they want to marry. The consolation prize if they fail: a New Year’s trip to Hawaii. What have they got to lose? Love ‘em and leave ‘em had always been Dr. Jessica Mizrahi’s motto. No way was anyone going to get inside her heart and hurt her. Again. On the night of Seri’s wedding, Jess falls into a hot and heavy quickie with a bold, bad boy chef.

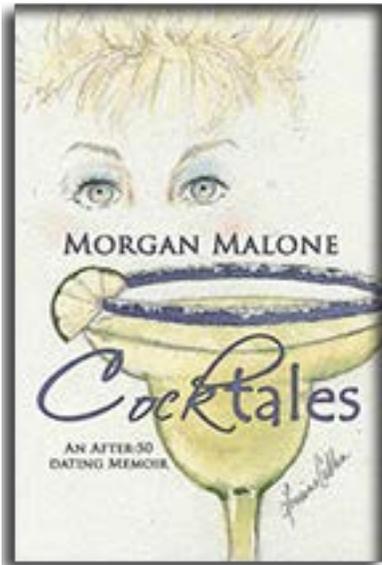

The next day, she’s back in Saratoga Springs and her busy practice, beautiful apartment and no men complicating her life. Then, the chef shows up in her hometown, to open a long-awaited restaurant right next door. Jess fights the attraction but she’s drawn to the warmth in his flashing eyes, the humor lurking behind his cocky smirks and the memories of their brief but blistering time together. He’s more than he seemed and is becoming more than she can handle. Steve Cole is the hottest chef in Manhattan. For ten years, he’s clawed his way to the top, earning three Michelin stars. But he’s not happy. He dreams of intimate bistros in resort towns along the East Coast. He’s checking out a possible location in Maine when a brash and beautiful bridesmaid seduces him. Word for word and move for move, she’s his match and they end up in the hottest tryst he’s ever experienced. Then she’s gone. Until days later, when she literally knocks him down in front of Yaya’s, the first of his resort bistros. Steve can’t let his guard down and risk another broken heart. He’s got a restaurant to open in two weeks! He’ll keep it loose and lusty, no strings. Then he’ll move on. Jess has vowed never to love any man and Steve refuses to trust any woman. But, the sparks that were ignited in Maine, are burning hot and bright in Saratoga. Doubts and fears from their pasts may be too much for them to overcome, but Seri’s challenge has given Jess hope. Does her sexy chef have the recipe for happy-ever-after?

Cocktales: EIGHT YEARS, EIGHTY MEN AND AT LEAST EIGHT HUNDRED MARGARITAS... When I turned 50, I decided to enter the world of Internet dating, looking for lust but finding later in life love. I met men who made me laugh, men who made me sigh and a few who made me cry. Some bad boys, some old-fashioned gentlemen and so many really good guys. I changed from a lonely, isolated widow to a woman who faced her worst fears, lived her most outrageous fantasies, learned some useful dating tips and finally became comfortable in her own, slightly wrinkled, skin.

32 Days: A Memoir of Love and Death: Mitch and Debbi were beshert. Soulmates. She knew it from the first day of law school. He came to the same conclusion just a few months later. From that day on, they were rarely apart. Debbi made one, five, and ten-year plans for their future. Mitch always replied, “Yeah. Maybe someday.” Someday came too soon. A terrible freak accident put Mitchell in a hospital remote from home, with a spinal cord injury that left him paralyzed from the neck down. Alone in the ICU with her husband, away from her children and family, Deborah struggled to manage their days and find a way to keep their love and their marriage alive. Every night, she wrote him a note of news, hope, and love. But, thirty-two days were all they had. Mitch died and Debbi was left with two small children. With the help of family and friends, she struggled to make a life for three seem as good as the life they had when they were a family of four. All traces of her time in the hospital with Mitchell were stored in the “sad” box, stuffed high on a shelf in the back of the closet. Twenty-five years later, the notes resurfaced in an unlikely space. Deborah knew it was time to share the letters with family, friends, and the world. 32 Days is the story of a wonderful man, taken from this world much too soon. A husband, father, son, brother, friend, lawyer and advocate, and the courageous battle he fought to stay alive. Until someday. Mitchell and Deborah’s story is one of love that transcends time and space. Of faith that grows stronger even in the face of the unimaginable. Of the healing strength given by family and friends. Of hope that life will go on. Of someday.
